July 5th, 1917.

Darling Frances mine:-

Are you still angry with me? Hope not, too. Felt pretty badly last night. Didn't know if you ~~[illegible]~~ were or not, so during the night I'd get up every few minutes. Now its 5.30 A.M. and am in the barracks writing to my little sweetheart.

How are you feeling? O. K. I hope. My tent-mate is telling me how he spent his 4th. He sure must have had a pleasant time.

Brought home some rose last night + after I had gone to bed, my father got up & finished it. You know he is not allowed to eat sweets, so my mother got a hold of me this morning & believe me, I don't think I'll ever bring home cake again.

Will close now, Tots, with all my love to my own little Frances,

Lovingly,

Joy.
